

SPINAL CORD INJURY – the Non-Traumatic Aspect

The TM Society is pleased to announce that it will be working with the Spinal Injuries Association to help deliver its new study day for healthcare professionals: The Non-Trauma Perspective. This study day is expected to cover subjects including the physical and psychological impact of non-traumatic spinal cord injuries (those incurred through illness like TM), the importance of timely diagnosis and the care pathway. This is a great opportunity for the TM Society to raise awareness and educate health care professionals about Transverse Myelitis and the related conditions ADEM, NMO and Optic Neuritis.

The study day will launch in Birmingham and also be delivered in London and Manchester this year. It is a must for professionals working in district general hospitals and rehabilitation centres who treat spinal cord injured patients. The study day is CPD accredited and free to attend. For further information, please email Sandra White at s.white@spinal.co.uk. Or to book a place, complete the online booking form.

The study day is currently scheduled for:

24 June 2015 - Birmingham City Football Club, St. Andrews Stadium, Cattell Road, Birmingham, West Mids. B9 4RL

3 September 2015 - Resource for London, Islington, N. London

Autumn – Manchester - TBC
